A FROUD HISTORY.

Richmond was evadled in woes. Pallisades protected her from the inreads of savages. Lafayette's cannon, thundered at Arnold when his troops threatened her. The capital of the State was removed here in times of war. Insurgent slaves planned her destruction. But she outlived all these things. War again came, Richmoul was the centre of vitality. It became the camping ground of the Confederacy, the capital of the South. It was begint with batteries of artillery, and battallions of sondiers. For four years the horrors of war surged against her gates. Finally they fell. Flames completed the devastations of war. Peace came again. The dark days of reconstruction added weight to the ruins of war. Insurged significant to the ruins of war was an expected to take it up. He demanded the fare from that gentlaman, which he refused her destruction. But she outlived all these things. War again came, Richmoul was the centre of vitality. It became the camping ground of the Covington and Macon last Saturday, and when the conductor came through to take up the tickets presented his thousand-mile ticket. Through some violation of the regulations this ticket was forfetted, and the conductor. Mr. McElroy, proceeded to take it up. He demanded the fare from that gentlaman, which he refused he was put of the train at Carlton trestle, about a mile from Athens.

Last week the United States revenue cutter Dix, having on board, besides the regulations of sondiers. For four years the horrors of war provided the fare of prominent officials of the Missouri. Planted the fare from that gentlaman, which he refused her for her was put of the train at Carlton trestle, about a mile from Athens.

They came in thousands—the vetgrans of the late war, the military, the ministers of God, and the men in high authority; the rich and the poor, the halt, the lame and the blind; all, literally all, came, and were warmly welcomed by loving hearts and hospitable hands. They came at the sound hospitable hands. They came at the sound the blind; all, literally all, came, and were warmly welcomed by loving hearts and hospitable hands. They came at the sound of the name, Robert E. Lee. They dooded memory with tender thoughts of the days long gone by, of the things that are never to be, and then they sent to sleep their thoughts in looking out upon a happy prosperous people, and a city rich in the gifts which nature has so leniently consented to leave in her keeping. They drank new inspiraton from the surroundings, blossed the good people of the hospitable place, went back to their homes and told those who could not come of the sopitable place, went back to their homes and told those who could not come of the good things that still flourished in the capital of the grandest state in the Union—old Virginia.

The reception is over; the veterans have evacuated the city. The chiefs have gone back to their places, but the influence of their presence is here. It is moving the people to look this way in every State in the Union. And the history of the Rise at Richmond has commenced.

THEY ARR HERE.

Paradoxical as it may seem, it is only the young people that are old nowadays, and the sid people that are voung. The young are old enough to grasp the necessity of action that a change, involves, the old are so young that they cling to the useless indications of last week's business meeting at the Young long of the past as though they were toys. A hint at change, involves, the old are so young that they cling to the useless indications of last week's business meeting at the Young for a new and improved spirit of feeling. The work of the press and the reporter is telling, I it is being felt. Hundreds of hands have seized the same rope at which he has been tugging so long, and the work will now be easier for all. Mr. Barton at that meeting was right when he said "the city needed a wide, awake, broad-gauged, progressive journal." It is life is spared him a flittle while longer, be will like to see the verification of the tumor he alithed to be added to the pr

Then take the words of that young tribune

Then take the words of that young tribune of the people, Thomas Nelson Page, at the same meeting, "Where is the public spirit of Richmond? The wealthiest and the ablest are not here." "Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall," and inactivity is masterly sometimes, but you are right Dr. Page. Send the torch of truth after the rich and able if they bar the way to progress and let the people follow its light. Tell the people of management that does all it can, and yet cannot manage to do that which will give the public satisfaction. The people of Richmond are famous managers for such management, when forbearance ceases to be a virtue.

And young men, hear Major James H. Dooley and hearken to his words: "I am happy to say that the old men are the croakers—the young men having a better opinion." Dr. J. William Jones said at the banquet given to the association of the Army of Northern Virginia: "I don't believe in all this stuff about Northern capital building a new South. It is Confederate pluck that is doing it. It is the brawn and the brain of the South that is doing it. Major Dooley said, Thursday night, at the meeting of business men: "I have had confidence in Richmond ever since I saw those brave soldiers sitting in ashes, cleaning bricks, after the war. In brief, "suffer that you may be wise; labor that you may have."

Richmond held a reception last week.
The South and the friends of the South were bidden to attend.

Week a bill was introduced in Congress to provide for survey to be made to enough age the construction of an inter-continental railway to connect North and South America. The bill authorizes the President to invite the several governments of Mexico. Central and South America to co-operate with this government in the appointment of an international commission to examine the possible routes, cost and advantages, and to make a proper survey for a railway between these southern republics and the United States.

An investor who recently visited Sheffield.
Ala, says: "I am more than pleased and very much surprised at the vast amount of improvements that have been made in the past three years in the place. Sheffield, being situated at the head of navigation on the Tennessee, has an advantage over any other place in Alabama. The climate is very fine, and equal to any in the South. Coal and iron being in abundance right there, I see no reason why this town should not be able to supply Pennsylvania with all the iron she can use. Besides the furnaces, I found numerous factories, all in a flourishing condition, and shops of various kinds tull up with orders; in fact, a great industrial centre. The modern improvements surprised me beyond measure. The streets certainly are the best macadamized I have ever seen, and the park is the pretiest natural park I know of. The railroad facilities are as good as any in the State. I predict a great future for Sheffield."

At Georgetown, Ga., some time in March, a negro woman by the name of Cylla Marshal was bitten on her right hand by a dog which had hydrophobia. Last Friday she was taken sick, complaining of acute pains in her right arm and breast. Saturday a physician was consulted, who, after a thorough examination, pronounced it hydrophobia. The woman has a wild look, talks at random and is restless, which at times increases to a violent delirium.
